

SITHFAB002 Provide Responsible Service of Alcohol

Course Overview

To sell, serve or supply alcohol in NSW, you must complete an RSA training course provided by an approved training provider. If you are new to the liquor industry or your RSA competency training took place more than five years ago, you need to complete a full training course.

Benefits

You will be able to engage confidently in the service of alcohol when you understand and apply the principles and rules of responsible service. When alcohol is served responsibly the workplace is safe and the venue is more attractive to a variety of patrons.

Learning Outcomes

The RSA course includes the following:

- NSW liquor laws and selling, serving, or supplying alcohol responsibly
- Intoxication, including assisting customers to drink within appropriate limits, assessing alcohol affected customers and refusing service
- Minors, including ID checks and secondary sale/supply
- Harm minimisation strategies
- Compliance and enforcement

Career Opportunities

- Bar work and roles including service of alcohol in hotels, clubs and restaurants
- Delivery driver for stores which sell and deliver alcohol to homes and businesses
